

It's come down to this: Treatment or prison

He started smoking weed at 12. Found pills a few years later. Then his drug of choice – heroin.

“I’ve given up years of my life to treatment and jails. It hasn’t been fun for a long time now. Every single time, it’s just misery.”

Now, at 22, he says he’s ready to take responsibility for his actions. He turned himself in on a possession charge in his home state, hoping the judge would send him immediately back to rehab.

See, he found a family when he went to rehab. People who believed in him, cried with him, cared for him.

The choice is up to the court... and after that, it’s up to him.

This is a true story as related by T. He spent several weeks in jail and continues to struggle to stay clean.
